I started this intent on using a conic gradient and then abandoned it for a radial gradient. I like the solution though. This is an interesting one. I ended up using outline and border to get this done and then realized corner shape might work well. I went with a radial gradient and then used borders to make the breaks in it. Final character count: 144. Just a border and background for this one with the body rotated. Final character count: 111. I just went with my gut and did some gradients. It was quick and easy. Final character count: 145. I had trouble actually getting the body to overflow. Not sure why but it just would not do it. Maybe the outline was the problem. This one was deceptive, I really thought it would be easier. Went through a few different ideas and settled on box shadows cause IÂ ... The inverted nature of these threw me some curve balls. I decided to just bust out a position fixed and get it done. I bet some funÂ ...
